

CITY MOVES TO TAX LIQUOR

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

GOVERNOR FUTRELL is old-fashioned. He believes if a law is on the statute books it should either be enforced or repealed. There is about him something hard and uncompromising and Roman—and I like it. I like it because that is how our public institutions are supposed to be. Politics isn't that way. Politics is the human weakness that men fetch into the temple of justice—the folly of imagining that by counting noses this way or that way we can change the essential nature of men, or alter the natural laws of the universe.

Holmes, Famed as Liberal Judge, Dies at Ripe Age of 94

Philosophy of Loneliness Achieved by Supreme Court Justice

HE HAD ONE CRONY
Massachusetts Station-Master Was Judge's Sole Confidante

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A career that involved the name of Oliver Wendell Holmes in the world ended at 94, the great liberal, died at 2:15 o'clock Wednesday morning in a death which a physician described as "the most peaceful I ever saw."

Undaunted to the end, the former justice of the United States Supreme Court succumbed to bronchial pneumonia.

Had he lived until Friday he would have been 94.

Of all America's great, probably none lived more alone from his fellow men than Oliver Wendell Holmes.

For almost three quarters of a century, the celebrated Massachusetts jurist, scholar and soldier, devoted his tremendous talents and energy to the service of his country and its citizens. Yet he almost always looked out on life from the seclusion of the supreme court or through his study windows.

He kept step mentally, however, with the mighty panorama of a changing civilization—in touch with the progress and problems of the plain citizen and jealously watchful as a supreme court justice of the rights of the individual under constitutional guarantee.

Philosophy of Loneliness
Keynote to the Holmes manner of living was one of his few precepts: "A man of high ambition must leave his fellow adventurers and face the loneliness of original work."

In the study of his preciously old-fashioned home a short distance from the White House, the snow-haired justice spent much of his time in "original work" and in association, through the medium of his books, with the great in law and in literature.

There, rising tier upon tier to the ceiling, were books by the hundreds, big legal tomes and the works of the classicists of the bench, and countries far from the turmoil of politics and commerce, he read his beloved volumes and wrote the opinions that were said to have made the supreme court reports literature.

Even in the prime of his life, he apparently had little personal need or desire for the companionship of other men. While traditional supreme court isolation, of necessity, kept him away from lawyers and men in politics, he remained aloof even from his colleagues of the bench. Only Justice Brandeis, who often gave eye to eye with him in "human" interpretation of the law, could be called a close associate.

Legalization Bill for Liquor Passes, Is Up to Governor

Futrell Declares He Will Take His Time Studying Measure

SENATE FINISHES IT

Wilson, of Hope, Votes "No" on Both Bill and Emergency Clause

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Governor Futrell said he would not act Wednesday on the Thorn liquor bill, which was completed with passage by the senate Tuesday night.

The governor said he had not read even one section of the bill as yet and could not say "when I will have time to study it."

LITTLE ROCK—Less than six hours after the senate passed the Thorn liquor bill, the Pulaski county unit of the Citizens Protective League of Arkansas was organized and had empowered an unappointed committee to obtain petitions representing at least 15 per cent of the qualified electors of the state for an immediate referendum on the bill if it is signed by the governor.

The bill, drawn by Speaker Harvo B. Thorne, to raise an estimated $1,800,000 a year in new state revenue, passed the house with no votes to spare last week.

Wets Waive Debate
Waiving all rights of debate, proponents late Tuesday called it up in the senate, allowed the opposition 30 minutes of attack, and then put it through the upper chamber with one more vote than was needed for passage, 19 to 15.

The emergency clause was then adopted 21 to 11.

The measure was steered by Senator Edward B. Dillon of Little Rock, author of a similar package sale plan previously approved by the senate.

The Thorn bill would make State Commissioner of Revenues Earl R. Wiseman the state's "liquor dictator" with powers to license and revoke licenses, and determine the number of liquor establishments for any locality.

Hammons Denies Reported Change

Is Well Satisfied in Hope, Football Mentor Declares

Grapevine rumors around over the state that Coach Foy H. Hammons is in line for one or more college coaching jobs and a prospect as athletic director of a larger high school, were branded as false by the Bubeat mentor here Wednesday.

"It's all news to me," Coach Hammons said. "I'm well satisfied in Hope and have no intentions of leaving."

"I don't know where all these rumors got started. They have had me slated for at least a half-dozen coaching jobs over Arkansas this year."

"I think it's the best policy not to comment on rumors. If I wanted another job I would let it be known, and if I wasn't satisfied in Hope I wouldn't be here," the veteran coach declared.

Asked point-blank about the college coaching jobs at Arkansas college, Batesville, and of the College of the Ozarks at Clarksville, Coach Hammons said:

"I have had no communications from either."

Kitchens Claims Congress Office

Calls for Special Election With Self as Democratic Nominee

MAGNOLIA, Ark. — (AP) — Wade Kitchens, Magnolia attorney, winner of the Democratic primary contest, directed against Congressman Tilman B. Parks, of Camden, Seventh district representative, moved Wednesday for a new election in the district.

Kitchens said he would formally request Governor Futrell to call an election in the near future on the basis of the decree handed down several weeks ago in which it was declared that Kitchens and not Parks, was nominated in the August runoff primary.

The bill, drawn by Speaker Harvo B. Thorne, to raise an estimated $1,800,000 a year in new state revenue, passed the house with no votes to spare last week.

Sales Tax Yields One-Fifth of Revenue of Mississippi

Collection Cost to State for New Revenue Estimated Between 3 and 4 Per Cent

Editor's Note: This is the second of two stories on Mississippi's sales tax and what it is accomplishing. Yesterday's story told how the tax operates; today's story tells of its results.

BY MARSHALL J. SMITH
NEA Service Correspondent

JACKSON, Miss.—After trying a 2 per cent sales tax since May 1, 1932, the people of Mississippi are convinced they have met the state's financial crisis successfully.

Governor Martin Sennet (Mike) Comer, however, does not claim the sales tax is a panacea even for all the ills of Mississippi, though 16,000 merchants are paying $180,000 a month into the state treasury. He vows out that other states must consider the sales tax in light of their own conditions as Mississippi has done. Nevertheless, inquiries flood the office of Alf H. Stone, tax chairman, seeking facts which may be used in other states when legislatures meet again. He says the sales tax is exceeding expectations.

Advocates claim the sales tax will produce in excess of $2,000,000 or one-fifth of the state's revenue.

Viewed as an auxiliary tax, this emergency relief legislation apparently has solved Mississippi's problem, allowed the state to balance its budget and restored sufficient confidence in the bond market to make possible the recent sale of state securities.

When the legislature met to consider new forms of taxation, anti-sales tax delegations paraded Jackson's streets and carried their banners of "To hell with the sales tax" into the state capitol.

But today the sales tax has caught the public fancy. Instead of uprisings, indignation meetings, bootleg purchases and flagrant violations, the 2 per cent sales tax is paid.

The average man believes the sales tax will ultimately abolish the real estate tax, or will lift the dread of tax sales from his homestead.

The question of collection costs continually arises. It will be February before annual reports will have been audited and expenses determined. However, unofficial estimates are already possible.

In August, the total payroll of the tax commission was $9000. This department collected $299,019.71. Of this sum, $197,431 was from sales tax, or 66 per cent of the total revenue, meaning

Shank's Execution Is Set for Friday

Poison Murderer's Attorneys Abandon Fight for Life

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Attorneys for Mark H. Shank Wednesday abandoned their year-long fight in the courts to save the Akron (Ohio) attorney, convicted of poison murder, from the electric chair, following an order from Governor Futrell that he must die Friday morning.

W. T. Pate Jr., and Robert Brown, Jr., Shank's attorneys, said:

"Under the present situation, due to the lack of time, it will be impossible for us to do anything further. We feel that Mark Shank will go to his death Friday with civil rights pending in the courts."

To Die Friday
LITTLE ROCK—The four-times deferred execution of Mark H. Shank, condemned Ohio attorney, has been set for Friday by Governor Futrell, and tentative plans of defense attorneys to appeal to the United States Supreme Court were thrown into confusion.

Governor Futrell set the day following withdrawal of a restraining order in federal court, and ordered the proclamation prepared, but had not affixed his signature Tuesday night.

W. T. Pate Jr., of Little Rock, defense attorney, said he would communicate with Blake C. Cook, Ohio attorney for Shank, and Mrs. Shank, before deciding upon a course of action.

"This action by the governor is unprecedented," he said. "It is the custom in this state to set execution dates 30 days ahead."

The governor took the position that Shank, for whose execution five dates have been set, has had ample opportunity to act in the 18 months, since his conviction in Saline county in December, 1933.

Missouri Fights Higher Sales Tax

Battle Rages Over Plan to Hike Levy From 1/2% to 2%

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—(AP)—A spirited battle between proponents of a one-half of one per cent sales tax bill and advocates of a two per cent measure was forecast Tuesday night as members of the House of Representatives prepared to start perfecting the revenue-producing bill.

As approved by the house ways and means committee, the measure calls for a one-half of one per cent rate—such as was enacted by the legislature in special session a year ago—but with a broadened base.

But just as soon as the house begins to shape up the bill for final passage, observers believe it will be amended to increase the levy. That is expected to start off the fireworks.

It was brought out in debate Tuesday that many believe the sales tax method of raising money to be "unfair to the poor people," while others see no other way to finance the state's obligations.

Attorney Atkins Ordered to Draw Up Tax Ordinance

Thorn Bill Presumes All Counties "Wet" Unless Voted "Dry"

35-YEAR ERA ENDS

Hempstead "Dry" Practically Continuously Since Year 1900

With the return of legal liquor to Arkansas virtually assured after 19 years of prohibition, the city council Tuesday night instructed City Attorney W. S. Atkins to be prepared to draw up an ordinance levying a tax on sale of whiskey in Hope.

The municipal fee for sale of liquor here was not determined Tuesday night, pending final action on the Thorn liquor bill by the Arkansas legislature.

The Thorn bill would assess state fees ranging from $400 a year for retailers to $1,000 a year for distillers, and would tax all hard liquors at 40 cents a gallon.

Presumed to Be "Wet"
Under its provisions, all counties in the state are assumed to be "wet" unless voted "dry" by local option.

When legal liquor is assured, Mayor Boyett said that he would call the city council into special session for the purpose of levying a city tax on the sale of whiskey.

Hempstead county first went dry in 1896. Liquor stayed out until the next election two years later, in 1898. The county, under local option, went dry again in 1900, and except for a two-year interval has remained dry ever since.

Other business with the council Tuesday night was the filing of Chief of Police Clarence Baker's February report. It showed:

Arrests, 214; fines assessed, $280; to streets and fines served in jail, 15 for $235; total cash collected on fines, $536; trash hauling, $70.75; total cash, $126.75.

Sales Tax Yields

$3600 collected $197,431 or $1 collected $54.56.

Another estimate by a close observer of Mississippi's tax system is that the sales tax cost will be 3 or 4 per cent. This is the same expense the state experiences now through collecting the ad valorem tax.

Start Cost Survey
A survey is underway to show how many concerns are escaping or ignoring the sales tax, what the final cost of collection is, what counties provide the most revenue and what business produces the most tax money.

Field agents store-to-store canvasses and special index equipment will furnish answers. Then Mississippi and other states can know if it is approximately the volume of revenue possible under a 2 per cent tax.

At present it is little more than guess work.

Already certain poorly governed, heavily taxed counties are seeking to have the sales tax increased from 2 to 5 per cent so allotments of proceeds may be made to counties for payment of bonded obligations and relief of property taxes.

These steps are being forced in some cases by threats of defaulting bond payments through lowered tax returns.

Counties Ask Increase
"The governing boards of more than one-half of our 82 counties have petitioned for this action," Governor Connor says. "It is a most unusual occurrence in any government when its citizens demand an increase in any form of taxation."

"But our people believe the sales tax, by decreasing the weight of an ancient and broken-down property tax system, will permit the exemption of the homestead from taxation, and will encourage the development of our resources and put idle lands to work."

"There are 20,000,000 idle acres in Mississippi."

"They want the sales tax to replace tax sales," Governor Connor said, referring to the fact that 45,000 Mississippi farms were threatened with sale for taxes when the law was enacted. "We, who found it difficult to launch this experiment, are now finding it even more difficult to secure for it ample time within which to prove itself before it is extended."

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Vogue for Colored Nails Is Becoming More Exacting.

Within the past week a well-known cosmetic house that specializes in smart liquid nail polish has sent out a color chart for spring. After a careful survey of what the best-dressed women are buying and wearing at fashionable winter resorts, this smart facturer forecasts what will be good everywhere this spring.

Mrs. Harrison Williams, often judged to be America's best-dressed woman, sets the vogue for vivid nail polishes.

It's a good idea to polish the entire nail, including tips and little half moons; lipstick should match nail polish.

With a red frock, one should choose nail polish and lipstick to match exactly the tone of the dress. Deep, ruby red nail and lip makeup can go with blue costumes, but orange-reds, such as cardinal, are a bit more dramatic. Yellowish reds are good with yellow outfits. Brilliant cardinal lends the right note of interest to an all-black ensemble, particularly if you pin on a gay corsage of fabric flowers to match.

Gray and brown clothes need cause no confusion at all. Simply pick coral or coral cosmetics, depending on your own skin which after all, is the most important consideration anyway. Remember that you wear cosmetics to enhance the beauty of nature, not to give you. Never try to distort or change the color of your lips. Instead, use lipstick that exaggerates the natural shade, being careful, meanwhile to get a tone that harmonizes with your costume.

NEXT: Dramatize your own type.

Fashion designers are worrying about what the average man will wear this spring, but the average man isn't. He'll wear last spring's suit, after having it cleaned.

Plant-to-Prosper Contest Aids All

Those Who Don't Win Prizes Will Obtain Economic Gains

Each and every farmer enrolling in the "Plant-to-Prosper" contest in Hempstead county is a winner, whether he wins one of the prizes or not. If principles and practices advocated in the contest are followed, because the improvement in his farm practices will be worth as much as the prize, perhaps more, Frank R. Stanley, county agent, said today in emphasizing importance of the contest.

"In other words," Mr. Stanley said, "farmers following such practices as are laid down in the contest win if they lose. The contest is not being sponsored for advancement of any group, or any one individual, but for the purpose of placing individual farms in this county on a self-sustaining basis by growing an adequate food and feed supply," he said.

The most outstanding farmers we have in this county—the ones who are making money—are those who have, for years followed the very same principles embodied in the "Plant-to-Prosper" contest, Mr. Stanley explained.

Never before have farmers of this county been confronted with such a fine opportunity for balancing their farm program as has been the case since the agricultural Adjustment Administration inaugurated its crop acreage reduction programs with provision for use of the rented acres for food, feed, and soil improvement purposes. County Agent Stanley declared.

Until farmers begin to grow the products they need which they can grow, a large percentage of the income received for cash crops will continue to leave the county to buy products.

Whooping Cough Now Trapped On Plate

Modern parents need worry no longer about the presence of whooping cough among their children, for means have been devised by which this type of cough can be discovered almost as soon as it is suspected.

The new method is the so-called "cough plate" method. This is based on the established fact that whooping cough is associated with the presence of a special germ in the throat.

By the "cough plate" method the child is asked to cough directly on a little saucer known as a culture plate, which contains a substance on which the germs can grow. When the germs grow, they are studied under the microscope and diagnosis of the condition is made on the basis of what is seen.

"In fact, the diagnosis is now made frequently from this study of the germs before the characteristic cough actually develops."

In some communities the child who is suspected of having whooping cough is kept isolated until the diagnosis is definitely made and a warning placard is put on the house. Thirty-five days after the characteristic cough appears, the child can be released.

If, however, the material on the cough plates is studied regularly, patients are released from isolation 28 days after the onset of the disease, provided two consecutive cough plates taken 24 hours apart are found to be free from germs. This, of course, is exceedingly important, because it shortens the time of isolation and quarantine.

Another interesting measure is the making of a vaccine out of the germs found on the cough plate.

The vaccine consists of the dead bodies of these germs suitably treated with antiseptics and studied to make certain that there are no living germs remaining. When this is injected into the body, the body builds up substances which resist the infection.

Use of these vaccines to indicate that it is possible to shorten the attack of whooping cough and also prevent the attack, provided the vaccine is given sufficiently early to those who have been in contact with patients with this disease.

How a Maiden Lady Waged

Own War
"The African Queen," by C. S. Forester, is one of the nearest adventure stories of the winter.

It tells about a repressed maiden lady from England, much given to godliness, who is isolated in the heart of Africa by the outbreak of the war in 1914. Her brother, a missionary, has died, and German raiders have dispersed his converts.

The lady is hundreds of miles from the nearest English outpost, surrounded on all sides by Germans, and aflame with eagerness to strike a blow for England.

At this moment she encounters a Cockney mechanic who has salvaged a rickety steam launch from a mining concession. She teams up with him and sells him on the idea of sailing several hundred miles down a river to a large lake in the heart of the German colony.

A German gunboat patrols that lake; it is her notion that they can blow the thing up and thus make possible a British advance into the colony.

So off they go. They spend weeks on the river, braving foaming rapids and pestilential swamps, getting eaten alive by insects and baked by the sun; and at last they reach the lake where the gunboat floats.

Their launch is ready to fall apart, their clothes are in rags, they are ready to collapse from malaria and exhaustion—and the repressed maiden lady is no longer either repressed or

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Educators Fail to Teach Children to Be Happy.

It seems that when someone begins to talk about the soul and the spirit most people turn away. They can't stand anything preachy.

I don't know why it is. Just human nature, perhaps. So many of us are materialists and some may think that feeling, or spirit, is too hard to understand. Yet these are the very things that are more important to happiness in life than almost anything else.

Sometimes I think that in training little children, supervisors of behavior keep their noses to the ground too closely. An ear to the ground never comes amiss. There is such a thing as following one trail and not knowing the other forces at work.

Behavior clinics and specialty schools are all right. More than right. One might say, and the work they are doing in revamping hopeless children is marvelous. They also have a way of producing the latent best in all children under their care. Unguessed ability is brought to light and children of tender years often become prodigies.

Contentment Encouraged
With it all a certain contentment of mind is encouraged and this is especially true where the mental-hygienists have their way.

There still seems to be something missing. So far the child's training is entirely tangible. His mind offers itself for experiments as materially and transparently as his body. He is, in short, known by the laboratory name of "case work."

Is there nothing else?
Let us go far back to the days when there was little education. The plane was pretty level then because no one had much learning. As education became more universal, the plane grew higher. Colleges reared their heads. As education spread, the competition spread, therefore unhappiness. The elect got all the jags although there were better and smarter village-Hampdens who had no chance.

The last few years have burst that bubble. Added to the disappointed were the disgruntled. We have an enormous population of unhappy people, not all young now, who have found their training gone to ashes without any resource to combat it, or to encourage them.

We need to look ahead. The little children who are other being made into hybrids in specialty schools or driven to produce their best in public schools, should be benefited by past experience. The whole trend is mental. It is still competitive, and like the level-finder in flood waters rising higher. Will they be happier for it?

After a while everyone will be crowding that rare upper air that is supposed to be enviable and blessed. Then what? Won't history repeat itself and children, then adult enough to know, look back and feel they have been given little enough after all? No power in themselves, or without themselves, to be content with life as it happens to them?

This is why I believe we are cheating many children. The finest spiritual qualities are peace, kindness, service, humility and honesty with others and with self. And certain patient tolerance. Remove religion from it if you like, but I do not think you can. Right now the world is starving for a different diet to feed its heart muscles.

Everyone says we must change human nature before we can expect contentment and peace, but here we are, working daily with little children in all sorts of laboratories and schools, and doing almost nothing about it. Education is much but not all. A well-balanced mind is not all. A well-balanced soul is victory. The old achieve it—sometimes. But I think that children could, in very simple ways, be taught it too.

SILKEN SPINDLES

by Laura Lu Brookman © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
GALE HENDERSON, pretty and 25, works in a silk mill. She and her 10-year-old brother, PHIL, support their invalid father.
STEVE MEYERS, who also works in the mill, asks Gale to marry him. She delays giving her answer.

Gale goes skating, breaks through the ice and is rescued by PHILAN WESTMORE, whose father, now dead, built the mill. Philan has come home after two years in Paris, ready to take his place in the mill.

VICKY, PHILAN's daughter of ROBERT THATCHER, general manager of the mill, schemes to captivate Philan. She sees him with Gale and is furious. Convinced to meet Gale, she tells her that she (Vicky) and Philan are engaged to be married. Gale, believing Philan has been amusing himself at her expense, is deeply hurt. She refuses to see him again.

Philan, trying to forget Gale, turns to Vicky.

Phil loses his job. Coming home after a search for work, he encounters ED VOGEL with his friends, STROUDE and "LEFTY." There is a street fight in which others join. Then a gun is fired.

NOV GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLII

THERE was an instant of paralysis, and then frenzy. A bubbling of voices. Men with startled eyes and stunned faces. A sense of tragedy, electric, contagious, the air. Someone shouted, "He's killed him!" and, as though at a signal, the spell was broken.

Joe Gillespie shoved a barricaded shoulder aside and pushed his way forward. "Phil!" he cried. "Phil!"

But the sprawling figure on the sidewalk was not Phil Henderson. A man on his knees, bending over the limp body, said, "Someone call a doctor. Tell him to hurry!"

Men were trooping out of the pool hall now and lights flashed in nearby buildings. The crowd in the street swelled, as though by magic. Women's voices joined with men's.

"What's happened?" "Did somebody fire a gun?" "Who was it?" The questions rose, shrill, excited.

"It's Ed Vogel!" "WHAT?" "Someone shot Ed Vogel!" "Vogel they say somebody's killed him."

"Did you find out what happened?" "It's Vogel! SOMEBODY KILLED ED VOGEL!"

Phil Henderson stared stupidly at the man on the sidewalk. "But—what was it?" he asked. "I mean how?"

A POLICEMAN shouldered his way into the crowd. "What's the trouble?" he demanded, and then, seeing the figure on the sidewalk, added a sharp exclamation. "It's Ed Vogel," Stroude told him. "And this is the fellow who shot him."

Phil's protest was lost. The doctor was pushing through the crowd, issuing orders for the on-lookers to stand back. The doctor knelt on the sidewalk, slipped an arm under the crumpled body.

His verdict came crisply a moment later. "He's alive," he announced. "Can't tell how badly he's hurt. We'll have to get him to the hospital as soon as possible. Somebody give me a hand."

Volunteers stepped forward. The doctor took charge efficiently, quietly. In 10 minutes an ambulance had arrived and Vogel was lifted inside. His eyes remained closed. There was a dark stain on the front of his coat. A woman's voice rose, weeping hysterically, as the ambulance set off down the street.

At a distance Stroude's companion, "Lefty," was saying to the policeman, "Sure, I saw him! This guy and Vogel had this argument. The fellow got ugly and Vogel let him have it. He was gettin' the best of it when this guy pulled the gun."

"But I didn't!" Phil protested. "I haven't got a gun, I tell you!" "Haven't, eh?"

The policeman's hands, slapping Phil's coat pockets, encountered something bulky. He reached inside, drew out a .38 revolver. It had a dull black handle. Anyone who had glimpsed the weapon in Stroude's pocket two hours earlier would have said it was the same.

"So you haven't got a revolver?" Phil stared at the gun. "No," he said. "I don't know where that came from. I've never seen it before. I swear to God!"

"That's enough!" the policeman cut in gruffly. Come along. Both these fellows say they saw you shoot him. I found the gun on you. If Vogel dies it'll be murder you'll be charged with. Get that? Murder!"

"But I tell you I didn't!" "Get going!" The policeman's club emphasized the order.

DULL light sifted through the single barred window of the jail cell. Gale Henderson sat on the narrow cot, her arms around her brother. "Oh, Phil!" she said. Her voice choking.

"I was framed, Gale. I didn't do it!"

"I know," Gale held a handkerchief, already limp, to her eyes. "Of course, I know you didn't do it. Anybody should know that. But, oh—it's so dreadful. What are we going to do, Phil? What are we going to do?"

"They say if Vogel dies—" Gale's shoulders moved convulsively. Her hand, on her brother's arm, tightened. "He's got to get well!" she cried. "I won't think of anything else—I won't believe it. He's—oh, he's got to get well!"

Phil patted her arm. "Don't, Sis," he said. "Don't take it that way."

"But I can't help it. The idea of you here—in a place like this—"

"Never mind that," Phil said gruffly. "I'll get out of it some way. I don't want you worrying, feeling so bad. I—I'm not worth it. All I do is make trouble for you—borrowing your money and not paying it back, losing my job, getting arrested. It was bad enough before, but now this!"

"Don't!" Gale said. "That's not true, Phil."

"Oh, it's true all right. I'm just so good."

"Phil, please! Don't talk like that."

He went on, as though he had not heard her. "The worst is having Dad know—"

"He'll understand, Phil. He'll know it wasn't your fault." She was patting his hand soothingly, as though it were a child's.

Gale said, "Everything's going to be all right. We'll find a way."

"You haven't heard anything more about Vogel?"

"They said he was just the same."

Phil's jaw set in a hard line. "If I only knew about that gun!" he said. "Someone must have put it in my pocket when the crowd was milling around. If only—"

"You didn't notice anything?" "No! I didn't know anything about it until the policeman pulled it out. I never saw that gun before in my life. How could Lefty and Stroude have seen me shoot Vogel when I didn't have a gun?"

"They didn't see you. Of course, they didn't. But they're friends of Vogel's and they've been spreading the story that you and Vogel had had trouble before. Oh, Phil, there must be others who saw what happened, who know you didn't do it!"

"There's Joe—I don't know about the others

Beauty

The busy world has time and space for beauty and for bits of face, for paintings, star dust, silver streamers, and things as fanciful as dreams. Not all in nature men behold is lovely, practical and cold. For countless lovely things we weave for which no purpose man perceives. At times she seems to draw apart merely to make a work of art. Or brighten with her labors rare places which otherwise were bare. So in the busy life of man, which reason wholly seems to plan, the selfsame impulse bids him take the time to work for beauty's sake. And count as his supreme success trifles of dainty loveliness.—E. A. G.

President Vanishes New Saenger Film

Sensational Story of White House Here Thursday and Friday

The oldest and most recent of the Hollywood "miracles" is that which brings stardom to an actor already over fifty after he had passed more than thirty years on the stage and two years in Hollywood in pursuit of that elusive honor.

He is Arthur Byron who plays the title role in "The President Vanishes," at the Saenger Thursday and Friday. And he was chosen for the role because the film public had seen so little of him!

Lewis Stone, originally booked for the role was discarded in Byron's favor because the producer felt that Stone, a long-time star, was too well established as a motion picture personality to be accepted as the leading character in the story.

"The President Vanishes" is a sensational story, visualizing the kidnapping of the President of the United States, and what would happen if such an event occurred. The tale would lose its tremendous wallop, according to the producer, if the responsibility of the interpreter of the title role intruded into the part. The illusion must be complete.

J. S. Gibson Jr., Mrs. Edwin Dossell presided over the meeting. The program was in charge of Mrs. Jesse Brown, program chairman, with Circle No. 1 and 2 presenting the morning program, which opened at 10:30 with Mrs. A. C. Kell giving the devotional. At 1:30 the afternoon session opened with circles 3 and 4 presenting the program, with Mrs. Hugh Jones giving the devotional.

Owing to World Day of prayer services Friday afternoon, March 8, the Friday Music club has postponed its meeting until Friday afternoon, March 15.

The Brownies of Paisley school held their regular weekly meeting at 3:30 Tuesday afternoon. The Pack was divided into four groups, each group selecting their sixers. They are as follows: Dorothy Taylor, sister, Ruth Bateman, Imogene Ross, Betty Ruth Coleman, Mary Belle Taylor, Sarah Frances Sasser, sister, Mary Elizabeth Bright, Alice Lorraine Heard, Mildred Richardson, Mary Darnell Bearden, Eva Jean Milam, Marion Crutchefield, sister, Geraldine Whitten, Wanda Merle Cobb, Sallie Marie Sasser, Virginia Keith, Fatsy Ann Campbell, sister, Jessie Clarence Brown, Margie O'Neil, Mary Brooks, Edith Coleman, Mrs. Chas. Routhon, Jr., told a fairy story "The Magic Mirror" and Miss Annie Sue Andrews conducted a game "In Fairy Land." They were dismissed through the magic tunnel to return again next Friday.

Legalization Bill

Arkansas' bone dry statute of 1916, the bill would assess state fees ranging from $400 a year for retailers to $1000 a year for distillers, and tax all hard liquors at 40 cents a gallon.

Under its provisions all counties would be assumed to be wet unless voted dry by local option.

The first $500,000 in revenues would go to the general state fund; the next $500,000 to old age pensions; and all over the first million to the common schools.

Beer of 32 per cent alcoholic strength was legalized in Arkansas in 1932 and the present legislature legalized wines little more than a week ago.

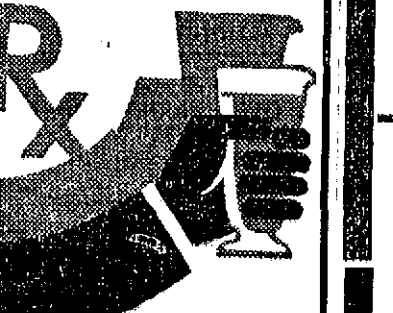

Only Senator Shaver of Wynne took the floor for the bill, speaking 14 minutes. He declared that "we are having to tear down in order to build up."

Shaver said he was for temperance, and would work with advocates of temperance for a more sober citizen-ship.

Senator Holloway was the first of four speakers who consumed all of the opponents' time and some of the proponents time when Senator Dillon asked Lieutenant Governor Lee Canzort to give them his.

YES, IT'S A SHAME THAT THE WIFE IS ALWAYS THE LAST ONE TO KNOW ABOUT A THING LIKE THIS!

WELL, I'D THANK ANYONE WHO'D PUT ME WISE, IF EDWARD WAS KICKING OVER THE TRACES! I'LL DO IT!!

IT'S THE FIRST TIME I EVER DID A THING LIKE THIS — I'LL BET THIS STARTS SOMETHING!

I'D GIVE A MILLION T' SEE THE LOOK ON EMMIE'S FACE, WHEN SHE READS THIS!

BUT, WHILE THIS IS GOING ON THE REAL WINDY HA, ACCOMPLISHED A TASK

THERE SHE COMES! I'VE GOT IT SAVED AWAY — NOW T'GET OUT OF HERE AND WILL I MAKE THOSE CROOKS PAY!
